About the Graduate School of Banking

Since 1945, the Graduate School of Banking at the University of Wisconsin-Madison (GSB) has helped develop banking leaders through a program of advanced management education. Today GSB is widely recognized as the nation's leading and most progressive banking school. It counts nearly 20,000 bankers, bank regulatory officials and industry consultants as alumni. These alumni occupy positions of leadership in banks of all sizes, the industry and their communities.

GSB's Graduate School Program provides a comprehensive course of study of general banking and management subjects especially designed to meet the needs of bankers whose responsibilities and scope of activities are expanding. The school's purpose is to meet the growing need for bank managers and others working in the financial services industry to acquire a broad knowledge and understanding of the major bank functions and their interrelationships, and to develop the skills required to lead and manage effectively in today's and tomorrow's challenging banking environment. Its curriculum reflects the contemporary trends affecting the financial services industry. Core courses address broad areas of finance, marketing, management, and the environment in which banks operate.

A wide range of electives allows participants to tailor their educational programs to meet their own individual interests and development needs and those of their banks. Speakers in an evening seminar series address the contemporary issues affecting the banking industry. The school integrates knowledge through computer simulations, case studies and other hands-on activities. This results-oriented program spans a little more than two years, comprising three two-week resident sessions in Madison linked by intersession assignments that help integrate the program and bring the educational experience back to a participant's institution. The large and diverse GSB faculty includes more than 100 top bankers, regulators, academicians and other professionals who are committed to sharing their knowledge and skills with program participants.
